

Abstract

The present invention relates to a process that enables constitutive and inducible gene knock down in living organisms using a short hairpin RNA expression vector integrated into the genome of the organism.